On receiving the awards, Prof. Indira J Parikh, President, FLAME said, "We are indeed very happy to have received 8 awards this year. At FLAME we give our students an opportunity to gain a more integrated approach towards education, by exploring new ideas and subjects to produce self-motivated & well-rounded, responsible citizens capable of taking on global challenges. This approach has resulted in the splendid performance at the awards this year."

Prof. P.M. Shingi, who was conferred with the Best Teacher in Marketing Management, said, "I am honored to receive the award, and elated at the brilliant performance by FLAME at the awards. We promote leadership as part of our curriculum, which has helped our students perform better at the awards."

The awards are in recognition of leadership, development, innovation and industry interface of Business school. The Business School Affaire started this contest 16 years ago and from the past five years, it has been dedicated to late Dewang Mehta, who headed NASSCOM and was pioneer in the IT revolution.

Youngest MP interacts with our students

Agatha Sangma, Union Minister of State, Ministry of Rural Development and the youngest MP recently visited FLAME (Foundation for Liberal And Management Education) and shared her thoughts and vision with the students.

In an hour long interaction, with topics ranging from reservation for women in politics, controlling carbon emissions to her learning from her political experience, she responded to varied questions from the students. Agatha spoke about the role that youth need to play in society today and her vision for a new generation of effective and empowered citizens.

Explaining the importance of having a holistic education, Sangma said, "You need to discover your potential as an individual and develop a mindset which encourages you to think and not merely mug up books. I am very happy that with Universities like Flame, students today have an opportunity to gain a more integrated approach towards education, by exploring new ideas and subjects, enabling them to become valuable contributors to society."

Mr. Parag Shah, Founder Chairman, Foundation for Liberal And Management Education, said, "I am confident that Ms. Sangma's visit will not only continue to encourage our students to grow as empowered individuals but also help them to develop a sensitized and more inclusive perspective towards life. Her ideas, thoughts and vision are an inspiration to us all."

Ms. Pooja Shah, Head, Student Activities was very happy that Ms. Sangma could visit FLAME & interact with students. She said "With initiatives like these we aim to create an environment where students can actively interact and engage with eminent personalities from various walks of life. This we believe is imperative for young people to acquire not only essential educational, livelihood and life skills but also develop a sense of responsibility, an ability to make empowered decisions, and inculcate a positive sense of belonging in their country."

When a first year MBA student wanted to know her advice to the youth of today, Sangma said, "In society, everyone has a different role to play and each role is important. So be sincere in whatever you do. You don't only have to be a politician to make a difference. Whether you are an engineer or a manager or a bureaucrat, each individual has an ability to transform the world around him by setting an example with his thoughts and actions. Become a moral driver for society."

Sangma also spoke at length on country's state of rural development, education system and the plight of the lesser fortunate in society. Dressed in her traditional costume Ms. Sangma was greeted by the students and teachers with a bouquet.
